Introduction and Background

The Ondo State Governorship Election is scheduled to be held on Saturday, November 16, 2024. This will be the seventh governorship election in the state since the return to democracy in 1999. The Ondo State governorship election is one of the off-cycle elections conducted after the 2023 general election. It became an off-cycle election because Olusegun Agagu's re-election as governor was annulled by a court in 2009 due to electoral irregularities which led to his removal from office. Olusegun Mimiko was subsequently sworn in as the new governor, replacing Agagu.

Electoral accountability and integrity matters across all democracies<sup>1</sup>. To enhance electoral governance and integrity in Nigeria and achieve improved electoral process for the Ondo governorship election, addressing issues that arose before, during, and after the general election is essential. Electoral governance here presupposes that substantive uncertainty requires procedural certainty. Its central task therefore, is organising electoral uncertainty by providing institutional certainty.<sup>2</sup> Meaning, the electoral process rules and procedures must be certain while electoral outcomes must be uncertain. Winners and losers of electoral contests should not be known beforehand, otherwise the institutions would be said to have been compromised.

Electoral integrity has been conceptualised<sup>3</sup> in a variety of ways, from researchers to electoral support bodies and practitioners. In this paper, electoral integrity is seen in the more holistic manner informed by human rights and covers a wide range of electoral practices<sup>4</sup>. The Electoral Hub takes same position postulated by Fisher and Sällberg (2020), “that analysis of electoral integrity should not only examine instances and perceptions of malpractice and fraud – negative electoral integrity, but also instances and perceptions of good practice – positive electoral integrity”<sup>5</sup>. This is because election processes will neither be all good or all bad. What is required is an analysis of both the good and bad of these processes<sup>6</sup>.

For this election, The Electoral Hub as an accredited observer will monitor the process, and observe pre-electoral period, electoral period, and post-electoral period activities through an electoral accountability framework. This approach is rooted in the recognition and understanding that effective electoral governance alone does not guarantee good elections, because a “complex variety of social, economic and political variables affect the process, integrity, and outcome of democratic elections”<sup>7</sup>. However, good elections are impossible without effective electoral governance. In other words, elections are multifaceted, complex and encompassing both socio-political and administrative dimensions. This perspective acknowledges that while the electoral management body (EMB) plays a crucial role, the responsibility for ensuring the credibility and integrity of elections extends to various key stakeholders and institutions of the electoral process and governance. These include the legislature, executive, judiciary, political parties, candidates, security agencies, voters, CSOs, and the media. Each of these stakeholders contribute significantly to shaping the integrity and quality of the electoral governance, electoral processes and elections.

The Electoral Hub emphasises the need to amplify these critical stakeholders’ and institutions roles in safeguarding electoral integrity. By recognizing that elections are collective and complex enterprises with diverse interdependent, and interconnected institutions, actors and multifaceted activities, which are influenced by the sociocultural and political contexts, we seek to promote a holistic approach to improving electoral processes and governance. Considering that the success, quality, and legitimacy of elections depend on the collective efforts and interactions of all involved institutions and actors, rather than solely on the actions of the electoral management body. Through this comprehensive view, The Electoral Hub aims to advance electoral accountability and integrity while fostering collaboration among all electoral stakeholders, thus working towards elections that are not only administratively sound but also socially and politically meaningful.

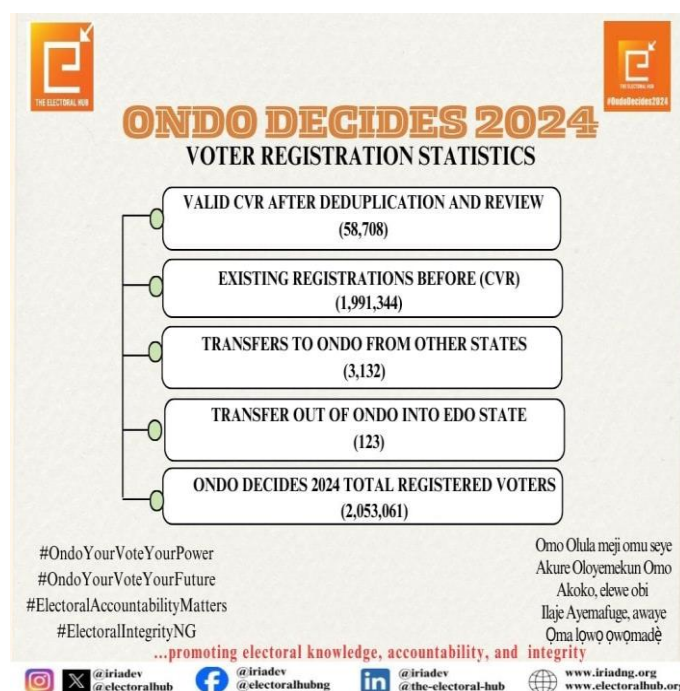

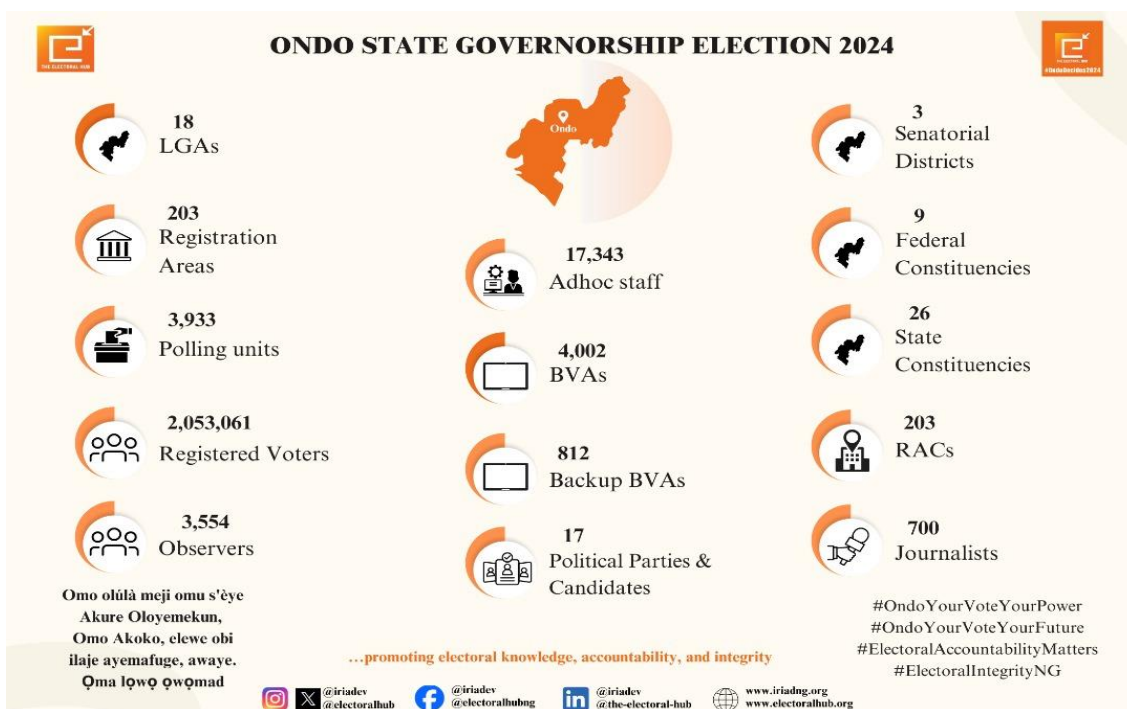

This leaning guides our work and informs the production of this Electoral Technical Note to enlighten critical stakeholders, educate the electorate and sensitize the public on the socio-political context and power dynamics for the forthcoming Ondo State governorship election. The Note provides key figures and covers five broad thematic areas namely: electoral background, socio-economic environment, political dynamics, civil terrain and stakeholders’ engagements, and integrity measures for the election.

9	Pre-election Litigations	Elections in Nigeria are usually characterized by litigations from aggrieved party members during the pre-election period. The Ondo State 2024 governorship election is no different. As of June 26, 2024, the media already reported pre-election litigation with details as follows: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>— Jimoh Ibrahim, a senator, and aspirant in the APC primaries, filed a suit (marked: FHC/ABJ/CS/588/2024) seeking to void the 20 April governorship primary election that produced Governor Aiyedatiwa as the APC candidate<sup>66</sup>.</li> <li>— Ibrahim alleges non-compliance with the provisions of the Electoral Act, 2022, and the party's guidelines during the primary<sup>67</sup>.</li> <li>— He sought to set aside the primaries results, to prevent Aiyedatiwa from being the APC's candidate for the election, and asked INEC to delist APC and Aiyedatiwa from the list of candidates unless a fresh primary is conducted<sup>68</sup>.</li> </ul> All pre-election litigations must be resolved before the elections to ensure a fair and transparent electoral process, maintain public confidence in the democratic system,

10	Power Dynamics	For this election, the political landscape has been lively, with series of changes as evident in recent defections across party lines. The following provides some view of the power dynamics the state: PDP <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>— In a significant political shift ahead of the Ondo State election, in February over 2000 members of the PDP, along with chieftains of ZLP, defected to the ruling APC<sup>69</sup>.</li> <li>— This wave of defections includes notable figures such as Dare Aliu, a former House of Representatives candidate; Dr. Felder Olatunji Adeoye; Hon. Prince Olu Falolu; Hon. Anodele Ikumawoyi; Pastor Olatunde Felix; Chief Pius Akinrinmola; Hon. Isaac Olaleye; Alhaji Adebayo Oyewumi; Hon. Yele Akinya; Chief Akinmoye Ajewole; General Adegborioye Sunday; Chief Ayekomilogboa Tayo; Mrs. Toyin Akindele; Com. Akinmade Babatunde; Mrs. Taju Mopinola; Hon. Tonu Ala; Hon. Dele Faboro, Deputy Leader of the PDP Leader’s Forum; Comrade Ajisafe Omobumi; Mr. Olusegun Samuel; Mr. Adeyeye Michael; Hon. Adermola Elegbe; Alhaji Jimoh Ibrahim; Hon. <sup>70</sup> Ibid

- The defectors cited dissatisfaction with the PDP's effectiveness and leadership as their primary reasons for leaving. Following the defection, a former PDP lawmaker, Tomide Akinribido, emphasized their commitment to ensuring a total victory for the APC <sup>71</sup>.
- This influx of former PDP members into the APC is expected to significantly boost the APC's chances in winning the election.

APC

- Also significant is the June 2024 defection of over a thousand members of the APC to the PDP<sup>72</sup>.
- Notable defectors include Akinwande Fayinminu, the former APC Organising Secretary in Akure South, and Boboye<sup>73</sup>.
- The defectors cited dissatisfaction with the APC's leadership, blaming it for increased hunger, hardship, and lack of internal democracy within the party. They also criticized the APC for operating like an "occultic group" and failing to integrate many members<sup>74</sup>.
- The defections could weaken the APC's popularity and strengthen the PDP's position in the election. The PDP, with Hon. Agboola Ajayi, as its flagbearer is positioning itself as a better alternative, aiming to capitalize on the internal issues

INTEGRITY MEASURES

16	Integrity Measures for Ondo State Electoral Process	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>— INEC has followed the timeline and schedule and properly made regulations and guidelines public. Hence fostering certainty and stability.</li> <li>— INEC effectively engages with stakeholders evidenced by INEC routinely communicating the election preparations through several meetings.</li> <li>— Additionally, INEC has consistently educated and sensitized the electorate and the public by posting information on its website and engaging through meetings at the local levels, conventional and social media.</li> <li>— To ensure that every eligible voter is listed in the voter registration for the 2024 Ondo State Governorship Election, the Commission authorized the CVR exercise, which took place from May 27 to June 2024.</li> </ul>

- Voter education activities have been conducted. These were carried out offline - grassroots community interactions, and online - social media engagements.
- INEC has disclosed all election-related information to all key stakeholders and the public. The public can, for instance, could get details on candidates, political parties, PVC collection, election technology, and voter registration.
- As was the practice of INEC, the implementation of the INEC Results Viewing portal (IReV) would strengthen the process' integrity through measures of transparency and accountability.
- There is freedom for CSOs other stakeholders to engage in the process and engage with the INEC.
- The Commission for seven days displayed the voters register claims and objections by citizens in Edo and Ondo states in the 395 Wards across the two States<sup>136</sup>.
- PVCs have been made available to citizens in two stages. The first collection of 55,859 PVCs at RAs from October 17 – 21, 2024. The second collection of 61,919 PVCs at LGAs from October 23- 29, 2024<sup>137</sup>.
- On November 6, 2024, the Commission tested the BVAS machine's usability, effectiveness, and operation at selected PUs and LGAs in the state as part of INEC's preparation for the election. Functionality of the IReV was also tested<sup>138</sup>.

Conclusion

Electoral Accountability and Integrity Matters! As already stated in the introduction, electoral processes comprise inordinate complexity and interdependence of diverse stakeholders and multifaceted activities. All these different stakeholders are responsible for quality, credibility and integrity of elections. In other words, they are important for free, fair, and credible elections.

The forthcoming 2024 Ondo State governorship election will significantly impact the state's future. Given its significance, this Electoral Technical Note offers a comprehensive overview of the various aspects of this election, scheduled for November 16, 2024.

It is crucial to understand the context of the election. This marks the seventh governorship election in Ondo following the restoration of civilian government in 1999. It presents an opportunity to enforce the Electoral Act, 2022, to enhance INEC's capacities and reinforce the integrity of elections in Nigeria. Moreover, this election provides an opportunity for INEC and other electoral stakeholders to apply the lessons learned from other off-cycle elections. Ondo State's unique geography, cultural diversity, and population will all contribute to shaping the election. The political landscape is dynamic, with 17 political parties vying for power, including the incumbent APC and the primary opposition, the PDP. Political defections underscore power dynamics and their potential impact on election outcomes.

The involvement of community stakeholders and Civil Society Organizations (CSOs) is also a crucial aspect of the civil domain. The impact of traditional leaders, alongside the active participation of CSOs collaborating with security agencies, is vital to maintaining a peaceful election environment. Lastly, measures to ensure transparency and trust have been implemented such as stakeholders' engagements, the deployment of electoral technologies, accredited observers and a test of the BVAS and IReV from the mock accreditation exercise aim to enhance the integrity of the electoral process.

For this election, the knowledge gained and lessons learnt from past elections, the active participation of stakeholders, and the implementation of measures to ensure integrity will all play a part in creating a more transparent, credible, trustworthy, accountable and peaceful electoral process. The citizens of Ondo and the entire nation eagerly anticipate the outcome of this decisive election, which will undoubtedly influence the state's governance for the next four years. Our collective aspiration is that this election will signify progress toward enhancing the credibility and integrity of Nigeria’s electoral governance and democratic development.
