

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE, NOVEMBER 10, 2025

Post-election Statement for the 2025 Anambra Governorship Election

The Electoral Hub congratulates and commends Ndi Anambra on the successful conduct of the November 8, 2025, governorship election, Ndewo nu. We also commend the Independent National Electoral Commission (INEC) for the relative professionalism and transparency demonstrated throughout the electoral process.

As an accredited observer and a CSO committed to promoting electoral knowledge, accountability, inclusion, and integrity, The Electoral Hub monitored the process, from pre-election preparations to post-election activities, using an electoral accountability framework. This framework recognises that elections are multifaceted and complex, involving both socio-political, civic, legal, and administrative dimensions. While INEC plays a central role, quality elections depend on the contributions of various critical stakeholders, including the political parties, candidates, security forces, executive/presidency, civil society organizations, media, and voters themselves. This collaborative approach is crucial in safeguarding electoral integrity and ensuring the success of democratic governance. Several notable improvements characterised the Anambra governorship election compared to previous elections, which all contributed to the integrity of the election. One of such improvements is the prompt upload of PU results to the IReV. Others include

- Compliance with the Election Timetable and Schedule: Demonstrating strict adherence to the legal frameworks for elections, INEC carried out every election activity in line with its official timetable and schedule. This level of precision highlights INEC's dedication to maintaining the credibility and integrity of the electoral process.
- Timely Opening of Polls: for the election, Polling Units (PUs) were expected to be opened at 8.30 AM and closed at 2.30 PM. Polls started promptly at most PUs at 8:30 AM. This timely opening helped ensure an orderly start to voting, minimized delays, and contributed to the overall quality and success of the election.
- Performance of the Bimodal Voter Accreditation System (BVAS): BVAS technology again proved its value in biometric voter verification, significantly reducing impersonation and multiple voting. It enabled the timely collection and upload of results to the INEC Result Viewing Portal (IReV), with 99.62% of PUs' results uploaded as of 9:15 am on Sunday, November 9, 2025. This transparency supported real-time result monitoring and enhanced public confidence in the election's integrity.
- Ad-hoc Staff Performance: Ad-hoc staff, including presiding officers, collation officials, and NYSC members, displayed commendable professionalism and efficiency. There was, to a great extent, adherence to guidelines and regulations to ensure transparent administration of voting, accreditation, and the collation process.

- Efficient Collation Process: Following the close of polls, INEC commenced an efficient and transparent collation of votes starting at the Ward level, then Local Government level, and culminating in the State Collation Centre in Awka. Professor Edogah Omoregie, SAN, oversaw the collation, announced the results as of 8:18 am on November 9, 2025, and declared Professor Chukwuma Charles Soludo (APGA) as the election winner, having secured 422,664 votes. His closest contender, Prince Nicholas Ukachukwu (APC), garnered 99,445 votes.
- Election Logistics: Considerable improvements in electoral logistics were evidenced throughout the process. On election day, the majority of PUs opened promptly at 8:30 AM, reflecting INEC's rigorous planning and deployment. 24,000 ad-hoc staff and 6,879 fullytested BVAS devices were deployed for the election, ensuring prompt, efficient, and credible voter accreditation and result management. Transportation logistics were effectively organised, with 2,233 buses and 83 boats hired from established state transport unions, including the National Union of Road Transport Workers (NURTW), National Association of Road Transport Owners (NARTO), and the Maritime Workers' Union of Nigeria (MWUN). These vehicles, supported by security escorts, facilitated the timely movement of electoral materials and personnel, particularly to remote and riverine locations, demonstrating INEC's improved logistics coordination relative to previous elections.
- Electoral Inclusivity: The election featured commendable inclusivity. Women, including pregnant women and mothers with infants, were prioritised at PUs, consistent with the Electoral Act 2022 provision and INEC guidelines. In compliance with Section 54 of the Electoral Act 2022, provisions for voters with disabilities (VWD) included braille and magnifying glasses at PUs and the deployment of sign language interpreters in 25 designated polling stations, ensuring wider accessibility and participation.
- Election Results Management and IReV: The prompt and extensive uploading of PU results (EC8A forms) to the IReV significantly enhanced the transparency of the November 8, 2025, Anambra governorship election. By 6:57 pm on election day, over 96.05% of polling unit results had been uploaded, allowing voters, electoral stakeholders, and the public to monitor election outcomes in near real-time. At the end of the process on November 8, 2025, a total of 5,671 out of 5,720 PU results (representing 99.14%) had been uploaded to the IReV portal. By the conclusion of result collation on November 9, 2025, the following day, 5,698 out of 5,720 PU results had been uploaded to the IReV portal.
- Security Arrangements: 60,000 total security personnel under the ICCES framework¹, with the police consisting of 45,000, were deployed for the election to maintain order and protect voters and electoral officials. Aerial surveillance with helicopters and drones was also used in historically volatile areas, and vehicular restrictions were enforced to maintain public order. However, while security personnel were present at many PUs, observations and reports indicated some exceptions. For example, Premium Times reported that in Anaocha LGA at Agulu Ward 2, PU 019, there were no security officers at the PU despite ongoing voting by 9:28 AM². Likewise, in Orumba North LGA at Central Primary School, Awa Ward 5, PU 009, election officials and materials were on the ground, but security personnel were absent as of 8:42 AM³.

Unlike the last governorship election in the state, when voting was canceled in Ihiala due to security challenges⁴, these coordinated efforts ensured a largely peaceful environment, allowing citizens to vote without fear or intimidation.

Downsides of the Election

— Unlevel and Unfair Field of Play:

One downside of the Anambra governorship election was the uneven playing field. For instance, there was the imposition of a mandatory ₦50 million campaign permit fee for the use of billboards and other outdoor campaign activities by Anambra State Signage and Advertisement Agency (ANSAA) for political parties. While intended to regulate and ensure professionalism in the use of public advertising spaces, the high cost posed a significant financial barrier, particularly for smaller or less financially resourced parties, thereby limiting their ability to effectively public advertising spaces through widely visible media such as billboards, posters, and branded vehicles. The ruling party, APGA, with the power of incumbency and also benefiting from state resources and greater financial capacity, could use these channels more extensively, reinforcing the imbalance. This situation raised concerns about fairness, as the high campaign permit fee limited of equal access to voters and free and fair elections.

— Election Violence: Although the election was largely peaceful, localised incidents of violence were recorded in some areas. Notably, a tragic fatality occurred in Orumba South LGA, where a local councillor representing Owerre Ezukala Ward One was shot and killed while attempting to cast his vote⁵. This incident underscores the ongoing tensions fueled by political rivalries and the activities of local militias, which intermittently pose security challenges. It highlights the need for sustained, and vigilant security measures to protect all phases of the electoral process and ensure the safety of voters and election officials.

- Vote Trading (Selling and Buying of Votes): One of the weaknesses of the election was the prevalence of vote trading, with monetary exchanges between party agents and voters at PUs ranging from N3,000 to N20,000. This malpractice compromises the integrity of elections. There is, therefore, need for stronger electoral law enforcement and targeted voter education campaigns to address this menace.
- Voter Turnout: Voters' engagement in the process remained low with only about 21.4% of the registered voters / electorate voting. This low turnout reflects voter apathy and disillusionment with broader socio-economic and political issues. Boosting voter participation through sustained civic education and inclusive policies remains an urgent priority.

Conclusion

While the 2025 Anambra Governorship election marks improvements in the electoral process, it is worth mentioning that it has taken place in a macro environment of democratic recession and decline in Nigeria.

The election shows how credible, transparent, and participatory elections can be achieved when all stakeholders unite around their shared responsibility to protect electoral accountability and integrity. We call on all Nigerians to maintain active participation, to insist on transparency and accountability from electoral institutions and leadership across all sectors, and to positively shape the nation's future through continued vigilance and civic engagement.

The Electoral Hub remains deeply committed to promoting electoral knowledge, accountability, inclusion, and integrity in Nigeria. We encourage continuous engagement and constructive dialogue among all electoral stakeholders, including EMBs (INEC and SIECs), political parties, civil society, the legislature, the media, and the electorate. This is an imperative to cultivating an electoral environment that is free, fair, transparent, and conducive to robust democratic participation. Importantly, sustained engagement and collaboration among stakeholders are critical for building a resilient democracy that guarantees every citizen's rights while promoting strong, effective governance.

We urge all stakeholders and citizens to continue strengthen accountability measures, and collectively safeguard the sanctity and integrity of the electoral process.
